STEWARDSHIP

The story of the multiplication of the loaves and the fishes is a familiar one, and has many lessons, not least of which is how our willingness to share who we are and what we have-exercising good stewardship-releases God's power and bountifulness on the world and its people. Do we realize that there is enough for all if we are willing to share? Are we aware that God is at work when we share our time, our money and our other resources in His name?

Karen's Corner

Did you know that there is a story about a man who visited a monk? It goes like this: "The monk asked him, 'Why not?' that was the first thing he said. He had never seen me before. I hadn't said a word. 'Why not?' I knew he had me. I brought up excuses: 'My wife . . . the people I have to work with . . . not enough time . . . I guess it's my temperament . . .'" There was a sword hanging on the wall. He took it and gave it to me. Here, with this sword, you can cut through any barriers.' I took it and slipped away without saying a word. Back in my room in the guesthouse I sat down and kept looking at that sword. I knew that what he said was true. But the next day I returned his sword. How can I live without my excuses?" Whoa! Think about it. What excuses keep you from attending things here at church? What excuses keep you from being involved in different organizations? What excuses keep you from contributing to the church? What excuses keep you from exercising on a regular basis? What excuses keep you from regularly reading the Bible? What excuses keep you from reading any spiritual book? What excuses keep you from spending 30 minutes a day in prayer?

I could go on and on, but I think you get the point. I sure did. I have all kinds of excuses for not doing things that I should – like exercising on a regular basis! What are they? I don't have the time. I have no place to go to exercise. I don't have 30 minutes to just pray! I don't understand the Bible! I'd rather watch sports! I'd rather read a good mystery novel! There are movies I need to see that I haven't seen yet! I have to clean! I have to make dinner! And on and on and on. We all have our excuses, but what will it take to give them up? What will be sword that will cut through the excuses? For me, it was my sister's death in January. Ever since she died, I have had to take a deep look inside myself to see what I am not doing to keep myself healthy. I have started walking on a regular basis and eating more vegetables and less carbohydrates. I set my alarm 30 minutes earlier than I used to so I have the time to pray and read Scriptures. I have learned how to read the Bible and I realized that TV and movies are not that important. Sports aren't even that important to me anymore. We are only given TODAY. Yesterday is gone and tomorrow is just a promise. What excuses will you keep inside of you to avoid the things that are really important? What excuses are you willing to finally give up? I still love a good mystery, but I don't have problems putting it down and taking time to look at the stars with awe and wonder and thank my Creator for all s/he has done for me. No, it's not easy and there are times when I am sorely tempted to keep my excuses, but then that still, small voice reminds what is really important, and I follow where it leads me. So what is the sword that will cut through YOUR excuses? Keep your eyes and ears open and I will see you soon!
